

PROBLEM STATEMENT

The Travelling Salesman Problem (TSP) is a classic optimization problem in Artificial Intelligence and Computer Science. It involves a salesman who must visit a set of cities exactly once and return to the starting city. The objective is to determine the shortest possible route that covers all the cities while minimizing the total travel distance or cost. The problem can be applied to any number of cities and is widely used in route planning, logistics, transportation, and network optimization.